Twitter is the dream destination to connect with travelers as vacation conversation ramps up.

After extended periods of staying home, talk about travel on Twitter has picked up speed as people rediscover their excitement for traveling the globe. As vacationers book their travel plans, they're turning to Twitter to engage with their communities for research and recommendations, and that includes connecting with brands.

Journey deeper into this conversation with us, so you can connect with your traveling fans and help them get the most out of their journeys.

Travel is trending on Twitter again

With excitement building around travel again, people are turning to Twitter to engage with their communities as they look for travel inspiration and advice. In fact, there's been a rise of responses in the timeline about recommendations, destinations, and how to have the best experience.

People are going big on travel

People have been postponing special trips during the pandemic, including major life moments like honeymoons. Now, travelers aren't just dreaming big, they're committing to big adventures this summer, with a wide range of attractions appearing on travel bucket lists.

We're gonna travel like it's 2019

As summer draws nearer, people are getting more comfortable with traditional vacations. Our data suggests COVID-safe travel ideas, like camping, are trending downward. People are no longer avoiding cities, as they are eager to return to their normal travel patterns, looking forward to both business trips and personal exploration this year.
